MICROPOETRY

- ANTHONY ETHERIN - APOLLO 11

a planet rests, films a moon Apollo’s men (faint masters)
it’s one small step for a man
a film’s most resonant leap

DISTANT

their astronaut stands
he runs to a distant star
and rusts Station Earth

UNIVERSE

nature’s storming like meteors striking Luna
like men touring stars
Anthony Etherin is a UK-based writer of experimental poetry, prose and music. Written under strict constraints, his poems take inspiration from scientific theories and figures from the sciences and arts. His books include A Loris Abandons an Opera, a collection of palindromic sonnets, 'heterogeneous' palindromes and anagrammatic verse. Find him on twitter @Anthony_Etherin and via his website songssofinversion.com.

50 copies launched
May, 2016

Spacecraft Press
10 Varmoor Place
Calgary, AB, T3A 0A1